

THE ABC'S OF LGBT+

BY ASHLEY MARDELL

Figure 1

Figure 2

Figure 3

EXPERIENCE OF SEXUAL ATTRACTION

Figure 4

EXPERIENCE OF SEXUAL ATTRACTION

Figure 5

Figure 6

Example explanations:

Asexual: "This is where I fall on the spectrum, right on the end."

Graysexual: "I used a point because my graysexuality is pretty fixed. I experience low amounts of attraction."

Aceflux: "I used a bracket to show how my aceflux identity exists between experiencing little to medium amounts of attraction."

Person who does not experience high amounts of attraction: "I simply plotted where I fall on the spectrum, just above the midpoint. I definitely experience some sexual attraction, but not a ton."

Zedsexual: "I fall on the far end of the spectrum. No part of me is asexual."

Figure 7

Example explanations:

Asexual: “I’m not totally at the end of spectrum. I do experience minimal amounts of attraction, but I still consider myself asexual.”

Aceflux: “Dynamic arrows help show how intensely my attractions vary! Also, they range anywhere from zero attraction to some. I never feel more than some attraction.”

Graysexual: “I can’t simply plot my graysexuality with a single point. A bracket shows where my attractions exist, in a section towards the middle of the spectrum.”

Person who does not experience high amounts of attraction: “I experience a bit of attraction, but sometimes I feel like it’s not as much as most people. I plotted it with a point on the spectrum.”

Zedsexual: “I don’t think I experience attraction as much as everyone else I know, but I do experience it, and I still feel like I’m zedsexual.”

Figure 8

Example explanations:

Asexual: “The amount of attraction I experience can vary sometimes. I never experience more than minimal amounts though, so I bracketed off the left end of the spectrum to represent my identity.”

Aceflux: “I only experience two levels of attraction, and I fluctuate between them. I drew arrows pointing to those levels on the spectrum.”

Graysexual: “I’m not always totally sure how much attraction I feel, but it’s somewhere in the bracket I drew on the spectrum.”

Person who experiences some attraction: “This dot is where I fall on the spectrum of experiencing sexual attraction.”

Zedsexual: “My identity is pretty simple. I experience lots of sexual attraction so I’d plot myself on the far right.”

Figure 9

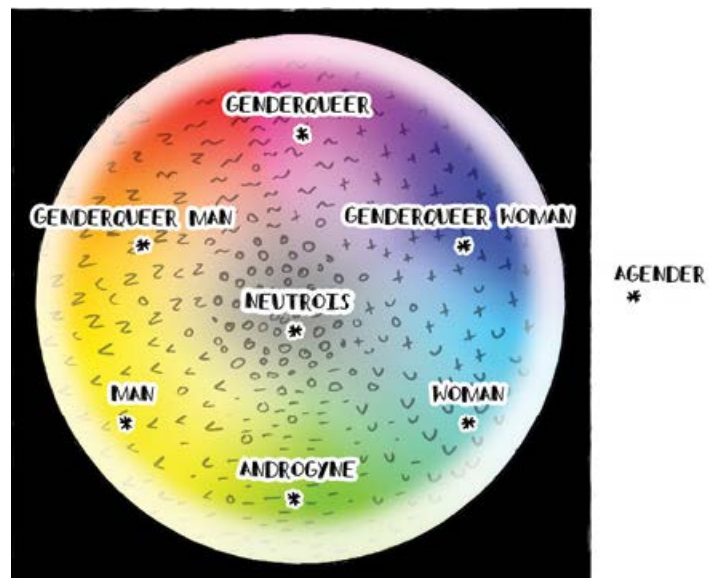

Figure 10

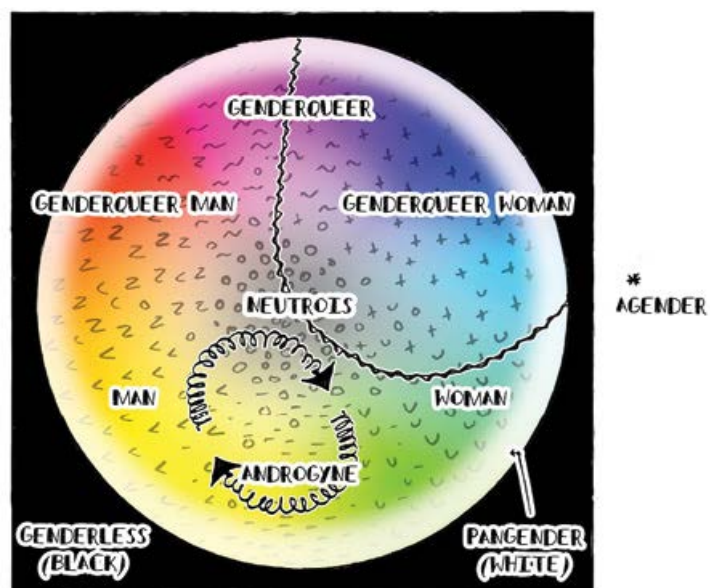

Figure 11

Figure 12

Explanation:

My gender is fluid. Sometimes I feel partially like a woman sometimes I feel partially agender, and sometimes I feel like a simultaneous combination of both these genders.

I express femininely, masculinely, and androgynously in that order for least to greatest.

I was assigned female at birth.

I am physically attracted to many genders. However, I typically find woman attractive most often, followed by non-binary people, followed by men.

I am most often emotionally attracted to woman and non-binary people. Although it does not occur as often, I am capable of being emotionally attracted to men.

Figure 13

Figure 14

Figure 15

Figure 16

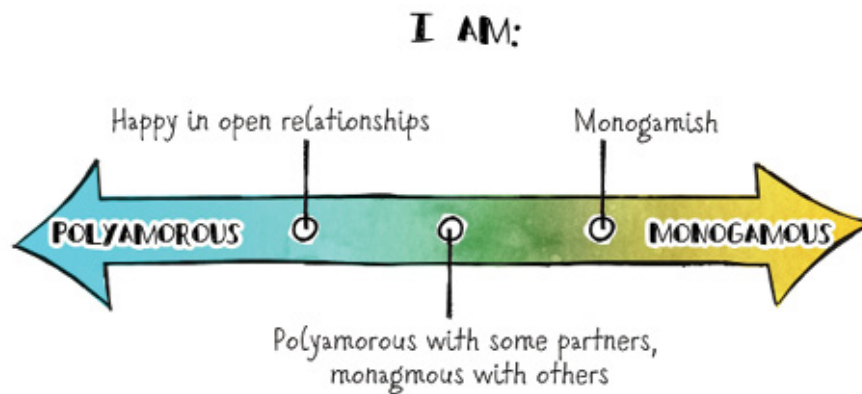

Figure 17

Figure 18

WHO I'M SEXUALLY ATTRACTED TO

-  1 When I identify as a man, I am gay. I am exclusively, and very much, attracted to men.
-  2 When I'm a woman I'm attracted to men. It's complicated though because I usually have to get to know a man very, very well before I feel a sexual draw to him. I'm wondering if, when I'm a woman, I'm demisexual.
-  3 Sometimes I feel agender. When I identify this way gender does not play an influential role in who I am sexually attracted to. I could fall for anyone of any gender if we had a connection. This is why I have circled the entire spectrum.

Figure 19

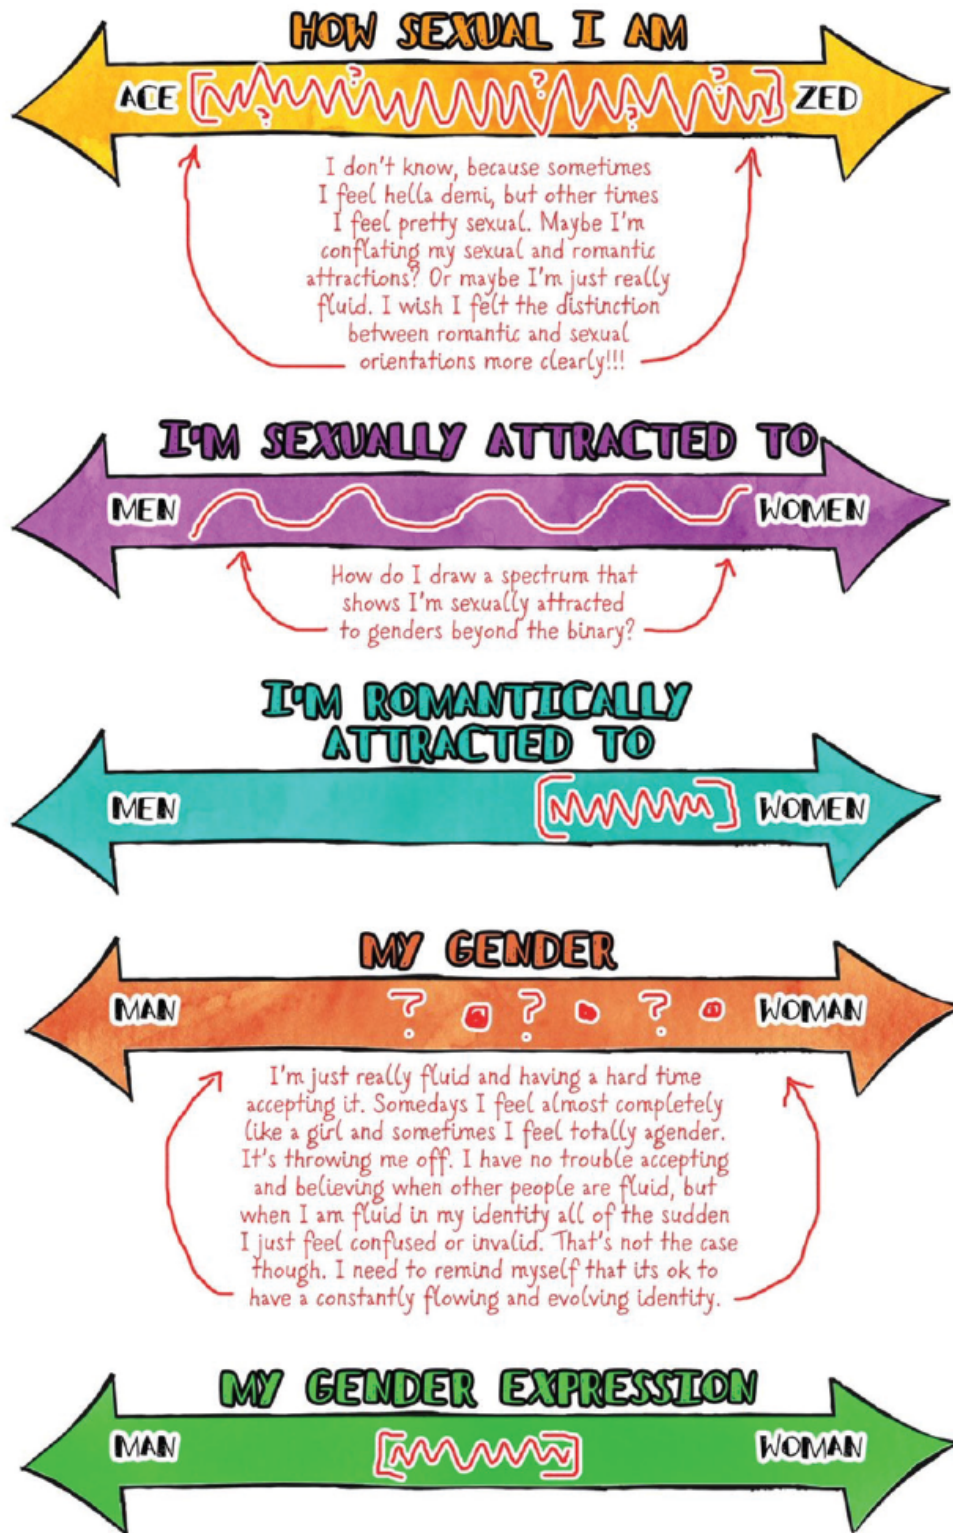

Figure 20

This is a spectrum where intersex falls between male and female. A person can fall anywhere on this spectrum. For instance, they could be male, somewhat male, intersex, somewhat female, or female.

Figure 21

This spectrum is in a triangular shape because some people feel that being intersex is not “in between” male and female, but rather a sex that is entirely different. Also, some feel placing intersex between male and female implies that intersex is an incomplete sex.

Figure 22

In this spectrum there are no endpoints. It communicates that sex is infinite. The kinds and combinations of characteristics our bodies can have is too vast and diverse to put boundaries on.

Figure 23

This spectrum communicates that it's possible to have a combination of characteristics that make our sex simultaneously male, female, and/or intersex.

Figure 24

Figure 25

GENDER IS:

